

Mike Saviage

Vice President of Investor Relations
Adobe Systems Incorporated

As vice president of investor relations for Adobe Systems Incorporated, Mike Saviage oversees all aspects of the company's investor relations program, working closely with Adobe's executive team to manage Adobe's relationship with the investment community.

Saviage has worked in the software industry since 1988, with experience spanning a variety of disciplines, including engineering, consulting services, sales, management and investor relations. While at Adobe, he has been a director in worldwide field operations, and an area director in North American Sales managing the national Acrobat® OEM and System Integrator sales business as well as the consulting engineering organization. Under Saviage's leadership, Adobe's investor relations program received acclaim by Institutional Investor magazine in 2006 as the "Most Shareholder Friendly Company" as well as ranking among the top three software companies for investor relations overall.

Prior to joining Adobe, Saviage was the west coast manager of professional services at Frame Technology Corporation, a desktop publishing software company acquired by Adobe in 1995. He started his career in 1988 as an engineering and professional services manager for Datalogics, an enterprise software publishing company acquired by Frame Technology.

Saviage is a member of National Investor Relations Institute (NIRI) and holds bachelor's degrees in computer science and mathematics with an emphasis in statistics from the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse. He also holds a master's degree in business administration from the Leavey School of Business, Santa Clara University, California.

Adobe is changing the world through digital experiences. For more information, visit www.adobe.com.