Adobe Accelerates Experience Design Growth with Starter Plan for Adobe XD

Adobe Enables Designer and Developer Innovation with $10M Design Investment Fund

London, UK — May 15, 2018 — Adobe today announced the Adobe XD Starter plan, a free offering of the all-in-one UX/UI design platform. The XD Starter plan includes Adobe XD for Mac and Windows, mobile apps for iOS and Android, and services to empower users to design, prototype and share user experiences with colleagues. With this announcement and the release of new features and enhancements, Adobe XD is the only cross-platform experience design platform to combine both design and prototyping with industrial-grade performance. And, as part of Adobe Creative Cloud, Adobe XD tightly integrates with designers' existing workflows and top tools such as Photoshop CC and Illustrator CC. Underlining the importance of this burgeoning category, Adobe also announced a $10 million design investment fund to advance innovation in experience design.

"UX design is one of the fastest growing segments in design," said Scott Belsky, chief product officer and executive vice president, Creative Cloud at Adobe. "The new Starter plan supports Adobe's vision to give everyone — from emerging artists to enterprise brands — everything they need to design and deliver exceptional digital experiences and explore the rapidly expanding field of UX design with no financial commitment."

Introducing the Adobe XD Starter Plan

According to data from Adobe, 87 percent of managers believe hiring more user experience (UX) designers is a top priority for their organisations as they play a crucial role in developing world-class customer experiences. A milestone for the global design community, the Starter plan enables professional and aspiring designers, teams and students to learn, cultivate and apply their design skills through free access to Adobe XD and share up to one prototype and design spec at a time. The XD Starter plan also includes Typekit Free and integration with Creative Cloud Libraries, making it easy to share and manage assets across devices.

$10 Million Fund to Empower Creative Innovation

To enable the vibrant ecosystem of partners, developers and start-ups, Adobe today announced the Adobe Fund for Design, a $10 million fund, distributed in the form of grants and equity investments. The fund will help designers and developers innovate in the world of experience design and leverage Adobe XD as a platform supporting tooling plug-ins and integrations with third party tools and services. An expansion of Adobe's ongoing investment in and collaboration with the design community, this fund will allow developers and designers to take full advantage of Adobe XD and integrate with the Creative Cloud workflows used by millions of creative professionals and top brands around the world.

Workflow Enhancements in Adobe XD

These announcements align with the release of new features and enhancements in Adobe XD, including time-saving workflow updates that enable designers to go from concept to prototype faster. New Adobe XD features and capabilities are prioritised and introduced based on feedback from the design community and user requests. Recent marquee updates include support for opening Sketch and Photoshop CC documents in Adobe XD, the ability to publish and share Design Specs (Beta) and integration with third-party tools such as Dropbox, Zeplin, Avocode and Sympli.
