Unleash your team's creativity with Adobe Creative Cloud for teams.

The admin console puts you in control.

Make the most of Adobe Creative Cloud for teams.

Creative Cloud for teams is the perfect solution for efficiently producing all your creative work, across your connected teams in a secured business environment. It offers exclusive tools and services to help your teams collaborate effectively and organise their creative work in a smarter way.

You're responsible for managing the Creative Cloud licences for your team. But as your team changes and grows, so does your list of users – making things more complicated for you.

To make your life easier, you need new ways to automate user management and stay in control. That's where the Adobe admin console comes in.

What is the Adobe admin console?

It's the central hub where you can manage all of your organisation's Adobe products. Hosted by Adobe and accessible via your web browser, it gives you an instant overview of who's assigned to your Creative Cloud licences and makes it easy to add licences and install updates.

The admin console gives you:

Complete control over your team's Adobe licences.

Tools that encourage and increase collaboration.

Easy access to expert support for your business.

User and licence management made simple.

The admin console gives you a quick and clear overview of exactly who your team's Creative Cloud licences are assigned to. It also displays your agreement anniversary date, when all your subscription licences co-terminate every year and need to be renewed.

Having a single renewal date significantly reduces your paperwork and saves a lot of time. No need to follow up on individual renewals spread out through the year. Just one renewal date, one point of contact and one contract to manage. Simple.

Easily add and manage users.

Before one of your team members can use Creative Cloud, you need to add them as a user in the admin console. It's really straightforward. You can add them individually or bulk import them using a CSV file. When you've added your team members, you can separate them into user groups to make them even easier to manage. You could group them together by team, office location, or which applications they use.

Quickly assign and re-assign users.

Using the admin console you can assign Creative Cloud licences to your team members by simply clicking their name and selecting the appropriate licence. If you've created user groups, you can even bulk assign licences to every user in the group. It's just as easy to unassign a licence when a team member leaves, and reassign it to a new starter.

You can even manage licences from a product approach rather than a user approach. The admin console enables you to divide licences into product profiles that can be assigned to and managed by its own admin, making it an efficient, cost-effective option.

Stay up to date, your way.

One of the best things about Adobe Creative Cloud is that new technology and innovation is made available to users the moment it's released. So it's important to keep your team's software up to date so everyone can take advantage of the latest and greatest.

There are several ways of managing updates. You can opt to enable team members to update their own software directly. Or build a completely new package of updates in the admin console that can be installed on every computer without user interaction. You can even deploy software across the entire network using solutions like Microsoft SCCM. Whatever best suits your team's way of working.

Order extra licences as your team grows.

When business is booming, you don't want the hassle of emailing or calling to organise additional Creative Cloud licences for new team members. That's why you can order them directly from the admin console. Navigate to your product overview, select the additional applications you need from the product catalogue and send your order directly to your Adobe account manager or authorised reseller. When your order is processed and confirmed the new licences will appear in your admin console. From there you can assign them to your new team members. Easy.

Get expert support when you need it.

With Creative Cloud for teams, technical support from Adobe experts is always close at hand. When your favourite design application refuses to co-operate, you don't need to scour the internet for answers. Just use the admin console to log a support ticket or chat directly with an Adobe support agent, available 24/7. You can even book a remote 30-minute session with one of our product experts to learn about the latest product features, or get help with a specific issue. Your agreement entitles you to two product expert sessions a year, per user and they can be booked through our Business Support team or directly through the admin console by your team admin.
