Stop Doing Business with Russia

Russia initiated aggression against Ukraine in 2014. On February 24, 2022, it started a full-scale military invasion to the Ukrainian territory. This brutal war and military crimes of Russian troops caused a humanitarian crisis in Ukraine with thousands civilians killed and millions becoming refuges. As a reaction to this act of aggression, many international companies decided to leave the Russian market, while some others continue doing business there as usual. We track such decisions of companies and urge them to stop funding the war.

A perspective view of a server room with rows of server racks on both sides. The room is illuminated with a cool blue light, and the floor is a dark, textured material. The racks are filled with equipment, and some lights are visible on the front panels.
